November 2020

About FLL

Prince Mohammad Bin Fahd Center for Futuristic Studies (PMFCFS) introduced an inaugural Futures Literacy Laboratory (FLL) for the first time in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. The FLL launched its initial round on November 16th 2020 and for two consecutive days, in collaboration with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). The laboratory aimed to stimulate collective intelligence through designing an open space that encouraged participants to unleash their imagination about the possibilities of the future in different aspects.

The laboratory intended to open participants' minds to critical topics influencing the futures of our nation and the world as a whole, as it is crucial to acknowledge the impact of our present actions on shaping a preferred tomorrow. In its opening round, the FLL intended to ignite futures thinking about the future of education in Saudi Arabia in 2040. This topic's selection is derived from its relevance to the participants' experience. The laboratory then aspired to stretch out in its future rounds to other imperative topics such as "The Future of Sustainability" and "The Future of Entertainment and Tourism". The topic selection process is significantly dependent on how the participants relate to it, in order to ensure maximized effort from participants leading to efficient outcomes, and thus, effective implementation.
